The undertaking was a success from the first, and the acreslowly at first, but now with rapid strides. The walnut tree's early age of bearing, its long life and the steady demand for its product tend to make the enterprise de-servedly popular. Already it is supersed-ing the orange in favor among fruit grow-

PHILIPPINE INCIDENT: Anniversary of an Exciting Day for United States Troops.

An incident in the Philippine-Islands that came near precipitating trouble between the Moros and the United States troops, in which the 8d Battalion of Engineers, now stationed at the Washington barracks, and the 15th Cavalry, now stationed at Fort Myer, played prominent parts, occurred just one year ago yesterday.

March 10, 1908, a party of Moro laborers under the direction of three enlisted men of the engineers corps of the army, and guarded by a detachment of the 15th Cavalry, under the command of a corporal, was engaged in blasting and breaking rock for the pier at Jolo. The day was a fiesta of some kind, and one of the natives in the working party told the soldier in charge of the work that he had better get a strong guard for the party that morning, as there guard for the party that morning, as there' might be trouble. There were but three, men and a corporal detailed for the purpose, however, and the men were stationed in a half circle about the working party, closely watching the work.

half circle about the working party, closely watching the work.

While they were so engaged a Moro, armed with a rifle, came around a corner of the trail that was hidden by some bushes from the soldiers. The Moro stopped short in his path and wished the soldiers good morning. Before they had time to reply, however, he brought his gun to his shoulder and pointed it at the foremost soldier, a man named Dowart. The cartridge in the gun failed to explode when the trigger was pulled, and the Moro threw it away. Drawing his barong or bolo, he dashed at the soldier. The latter started to run, but fell, and at the same time the guard and the other two engineers fired at the Moro, hitting him. The man stumbled and struck at Dowart with his knife, cutting him several times, and the Moros in the working party rushed to Dowart and attacked him with their knives.

Dowart was mortally wounded, and died before he could be sent to Jolo. The natives heard of the trouble and fushed to the scene in droves. They attempted to approach, the blace where the Moro's bedy was lying but in droves. They attempted to approach the place where the Moro's body was lying, but the soldiers held them back. The natives were enraged at the killing of one of their number, although no one knew who the dead man was or where he had come from. humber, although no one knew who the dead man was or where he had come from. The datto in charge of that section of the country made complaint to Col. William Wallace, commanding the Island of Jolo, and an investigation was held. The troops on the island were held in readiness at all times to restrain any obstreperous natives, and a very anxious day followed. Things quieted down in a short time, however, and an investigation was made of the affair, and it was found that the More who had done the killing was a religious enthusiast, and had committed the murder as a result of this enthusiasm. Such people were formerly very common in Jolo and Mindanao, and were known as juramentado. It is the worst type of the new wards of this government, and the officials have been endeavoring to suppress them, as they are a constant menace to the lives of outsiders, people not natives. They antagonize American supremacy and bring on conflicts between the people and the troops.

A juramentado is a person who has taken an oath to exterminate infidels, as persons of other religions than theirs are called, and who is prepared for the killing by certain of other religions than theirs are called, and who is prepared for the killing by certain ceremonles and rites. After the ceremonles the priest or person who has charge of the service, accompanied by the friends of the juramentado, walk with him as the newly made instrument of the church and wish him success in his undertaking. The juramentado is supposed to spring into the largest number of his enemies that can be found and to kill as many of them as he can before they can kill him.

No juramentado expects to escape with his life, so their fighting is always most desperate.
